One reason why I think someone would bully on someone else is because maybe they have low self-esteem. Maybe the person got a bad grade and he takes his anger on people instead of talking about it. Maybe they have a bad temper. If they do, I think they should talk to a psychiatrist to talk about his anger. My second reason is that maybe they get bullied on and does not like it. So they bully on other people. Sometimes they don't mean to pick on people. Big bullies bully on kids that are smaller than them, because they are defferenceless against them. Maybe they are in a bad mood. So when people talk to him or her he is mean and bullies on people. Maybe the person who is the bullier has a bad family. He maybe has a bad life and takes it out on other people. No it's not fair. If you want to take your anger out on something play a rough sport. Like football, or boxing. Something like that or yell in your pillow and hit your pillow. That's what I would do.
