

Mrs. Grano
Grade 3
Helen A. Hanson, Stoughton

Bullying

By Rachel Mace

If you want to know why kids get bullied then you should read my essay. Why do kids get bullied? They get bullied because they might be smarter and get better grades than the bully gets. Also just by the way they look, and the way they act. A bully is made of anger, so, just about anything they don't like about somebody will make them bully you. A bully will bully you maybe because you did something to get them in trouble and they would not trust them any more. They would want to get you back. A bully will think that he or she can bully you because they get what they want all the time.

One way to begin to end bullying is to have parents teach their children that it is unacceptable to treat their peers with disrespect and not to be mean to others. Another idea is to have school assemblies from time to time explaining the negative effects of bullying and who kids should turn to if they feel they are being bullied.

In a perfect world there would be no bullies, but we don't live in a perfect world. Until then we will have to continue to educate kids and adults about preventing bullying or what to do if you think you are being bullied.