

10

Bullying

Bullying is something that we must end. Nobody should be treated in the terrible way that bullies are presently treating innocent children. When I was in third grade, I felt more excluded than others, and a few people talked about me behind my back. Graduating into fourth grade made me open up to new possibilities. I met a new person in fourth grade. She was popular and everyone was her friend. Her desk was next to mine. Sooner or later, we became the best of friends. I was then feeling included, noticed, and people now depend on me for help. So if people could act more like that friend of mine, people wouldn't have to worry about bullies. Children, myself included, should feel safe when in school, or with others. If it were like that, more people would be happy. I feel extremely strong about this. Someday, I just hope bullying will end, and we can all live peacefully.