Some reasons that someone might be bullied is that they looked different or maybe they are jealous about what they have or if they got a 100% on a spelling test. No one really knows why bullies have to be so mean. But some people really get hurt by the bully. Also after kids have been bullied, sometimes they end up feeling bad about themselves. Also another reason someone might be bullied is by their size. Sometimes they'll say "Oh you're so fat you probably can't even fit through a door way." I have been bullied and I know how it feels! And when someone is bullied sometimes they don't tell an adult so the bully gets to be mean to other kids and that is not good. Someone might look different, like have red hair and the rest of the class has blond and brown. If someone makes fun of you for a reason like that, don't let them bother you because it's good to be different.

Or even makes fun of you because you're different, say well I don't care because I like being different. I know that is hard to do but if you feel confident in yourself it won't be so hard. Believe me I know. My advice is just stick to your heart because you know your the best you can be. And that is how you'll stay. I don't think that people should be picked on for these reasons because everyone is different and that is okay!
