STAY SAFE AND HELP KEEP OTHERS SAFE

All street drugs, including, but not limited to cocaine, methamphetamine, heroin, counterfeit pills, stimulants as well as opioids, may have fentanyl in them. Fentanyl is an extremely potent opioid that can lead to overdose deaths, but overdose can be reversed by naloxone (Narcan).

Carry naloxone (Narcan) for yourself and others. Test your drugs. Never use alone.

Call the Never Use Alone Hotline at (800) 972-0590 before using alone.

When to Use Naloxone

Give naloxone (Narcan) immediately when a person overdoses or is suspected to have overdosed. If they are not responsive, or even snoring deeply, they may be overdosing. Narcan is safe to use – even if someone is not overdosing on opioids.

Read more about naloxone at www.mass.gov/naloxone.

How to Use Naloxone

1. Call 911
2. Give naloxone (Narcan)
  - Pump content of nasal pump into one nostril of a person's nose (see below). Note: It may take 2-3 minutes to take effect.
  - If no response in a few minutes, pump another dose in the second nostril, if you have more naloxone.

PEEL

Peel back the package to remove the device.

PLACE & PRESS

Hold the device with your thumb on the bottom of the red plunger and 2 fingers around the nozzle. Careful not to press the plunger before the nozzle is placed in the nostril. Place the tip of the nozzle in either nostril until your fingers touch the bottom of the person's nose. Press the red plunger firmly to release the dose of naloxone into the patient's nose.

Give naloxone (Narcan) immediately when a person overdoses or is suspected to have overdosed. If they are not responsive, or even snoring deeply, they may be overdosing. Narcan is safe to use – even if someone is not overdosing on opioids.

Notice: Giving multiple doses of naloxone is sometimes necessary. Fentanyl is a strong, fast-acting opioid that can be purchased as is, or sold as other drugs. Most people who are overdosing start breathing again 3-5 minutes after being given naloxone. However, because of its strength, overdoses involving fentanyl can occur quickly and may require multiple doses of naloxone.

Fentanyl overdoses do not require special treatment. Simply follow the steps outlined above to recognize and respond to any overdose, whether you suspect fentanyl was involved or not.

Learn more tips on how to reverse an overdose at www.mass.gov/naloxone.

MA Good Samaritan Law: Legal protection if you call 911 and/or give someone naloxone (Narcan)

The Massachusetts (MA) Good Samaritan Law encourages someone who witnesses an overdose to ALWAYS CALL 911. Both the caller and the person who overdosed are provided protection from arrest and prosecution, except if you have warrants, a weapon, or enough drugs to be trafficking.

To read the Good Samaritan Law, visit: <https://malegislature.gov/Laws/GeneralLaws/PartI/TitleXV/Chapter94c/Section34a>.
